TOURISM

If This Doesn't Get You To Visit, Nothing Will

Boring: Meet Dull. That's what happened when two small towns, one in the U.S. state of Oregon and the other in Scotland, decided to get together and become sister communities. The unofficial partnership means that the towns can use their collectively descriptive names to promote tourism. Officials in the Oregon town plan to sell T-shirts that say "Boring and Dull." (AP)

New Secret Service Allegations

Agency investigating report of lewd activity in El Salvador in '10

Washington

Expanding the prostitution investigation, the Secret Service acknowledged Thursday it is checking whether its employees hired strippers and prostitutes in advance of President Obama's visit last year to El Salvador.

The disclosure came not long after the Homeland Security secretary assured skeptical senators that the recent prostitution scandal in Colombia appeared to be an isolated incident.

A spokesman for the Secret Service, Edwin Donovan, said the agency was investigating allegations raised in news reports about unprofessional behavior that have emerged in the aftermath of the Colombia incident. The latest, by Seattle television station KIRO-TV, quoted anonymous sources as saying that Secret Service employees received sexual favors from strippers at a club in San Salvador and took prostitutes to their hotel rooms ahead of Obama's visit to the city in March 2011. Prostitution is legal in both Colombia and El Salvador.

The Secret Service is investigating whether employees hired prostitutes in 2010.

Separately, The Washington Post this week cited unnamed "confidants" of the Secret Service officers implicated in Colombia saying senior managers had tolerated similar behavior during previous official trips. The Post described a visit to Buenos Aires in 2009 by former President Bill Clinton, whose protective detail it said included agents and uniformed officers. During that trip, members of the detail went out for a late night of partying at strip clubs.

Donovan said Thursday, "Any information brought to our attention that can be assessed as credible will be followed up on in an appropriate manner."

"They work hard, but they believe their off-duty time is something that doesn't matter. It does matter."

— SEN. LINDSEY GRAHAM, R-S.C., WHO SERVES ON THE JUDICIARY AND ARMED SERVICES COMMITTEES, BOTH OF WHICH ARE INVESTIGATING THE SECRET SERVICE PROSTITUTION SCANDAL.

In a confidential message to senators on Thursday, the Secret Service said it had not received complaints about officer behavior in El Salvador but would investigate.

The expansion of any investigation into behavior by the Secret Service could represent another mark against an agency that has been tarnished by the prostitution scandal. ALICIA A. CALDWELL (AP)

New Cyber Deal for U.S., Russia

Plan calls for secure communication in case of nuclear attack

Washington

A secure communications channel set up to prevent misunderstandings that might lead to nuclear war is likely to expand to handle new kinds of conflict — in cyberspace.

The Nuclear Risk Reduction Center, established in 1988 under President Reagan so that Washington and Moscow could alert each other to missile tests and space launches that could be mistaken as acts of aggression, would take a central role in an agreement nearing completion between U.S. and Russian negotiators.

Creating Stability

The cyberspace agreement would be the first between the United States and another country seeking to lessen the danger of conflict in cyberspace, and it would include other measures to improve communication and transparency. It would be, officials and experts note, an initial step toward making cyberspace more stable. The talks reflect the increasing importance of cyber-activities as points of potential conflict between nations. (TWP)

The deal could be final in several weeks, but most key elements already are settled, said U.S. officials familiar with the talks.

The use of the secure channel would be a milestone in the effort to ensure that misperceptions in cyberspace — where it is difficult to know who is behind a digital attack or even whether a computer disruption is the result of deliberate action — do not escalate, say officials from both countries.

"Both the U.S. and Russia are committed to tackling common cybersecurity threats while at the same time reducing the chances a misunderstood incident could negatively affect our relationship," White House spokeswoman Caitlin Hayden said.

Russian Embassy spokesman Yevgeniy Khorishko said, "We feel that these confidence-building measures are important to preventing conflicts."

Health Law Rebates to Top $1B

Insurance company benefits will average $127 per person

Washington

More than 3 million health insurance policyholders and thousands of employers will share $1.3 billion in rebates this year, thanks to President Obama's health care law, a nonpartisan research group said Thursday.

The rebates should average $127 for the people who get them, and Democrats are hoping they'll send an election-year message that Obama's much-criticized health care overhaul is starting to pay dividends for consumers. Critics of the law call that wishful thinking.

The law requires insurance companies to spend at least 80 percent of the premiums they collect on medical care and quality improvement or return the difference to consumers and employers. Although many

Who Gets Refunds

Thanks to a provision in the health care reform law, millions of consumers will be receiving rebates from their insurers this summer:

- ▶ Almost one-third of consumers in the individual market will get rebates averaging $127. These are consumers who are not covered by an employer and purchase their policies directly from an insurance company.
- ▶ Average amounts will vary by state. The highest will be paid in Alaska (average of $305), Maryland ($294) and Pennsylvania ($243). No individual market insurers in Hawaii, Maine and D.C. expect to issue rebates.
- ▶ Nationwide, rebates to individual consumers will total $426 million. (AP) large employer plans already meet that standard, it's the first time the government has imposed such a requirement on the entire health insurance industry.

"This is one of the most tangible benefits of the health reform law that consumers will have seen to date," said Larry Levitt, an expert on private insurance with the Kaiser Family Foundation, which analyzed industry filings with state health insurance commissioners to produce its report. Kaiser is a nonpartisan information clearinghouse on the nation's health care system.

Still, with employer coverage averaging about $5,400 a year for an individual and $15,100 for a family, $127 isn't a whole lot of money. It amounts to 2 percent of an individual plan, and a little less than 1 percent of the family premium.

And the insurance industry says consumers should take little comfort from the rebates because premiums are likely to go up overall as a result of new benefits and other requirements of the law.

Serious WikiLeaks Charge Stays

Fort Meade, Md.

A military judge refused on Thursday to dismiss the most serious charge against an Army private accused in the biggest leak of government secrets in U.S. history.

Manning

Col. Denise Lind rejected a defense motion to dismiss the charge of "aiding the enemy" during a pretrial hearing for Pfc. Bradley Manning.

The charge carries a maximum penalty of life in prison. Manning also faces 21 other counts.

In seeking dismissal of the most serious offense, defense attorney

David Coombs had argued that the charge didn't properly allege that Manning intended to help al-Qaeda when he allegedly sent hundreds of thousands of classified war reports to WikiLeaks.

Manning stated in an online chat that he leaked the information because "I want people to see the truth."

Lind said Thursday that prosecutors must prove that Manning had knowledge he was giving information to the enemy. If they fail to do so, Lind said she would entertain further motions from the defense.

Manning hasn't entered a plea to any of the charges. He also hasn't yet decided whether he will be tried by a judge or a jury. His trial is set for Sept. 21 through Oct. 12. (AP)

Boy Scouts Oust Lesbian Leader

Group says it has the right to exclude gays, atheists from ranks

Bridgeport, Ohio

The first-graders in Ohio Pack 109's Tiger Scouts didn't know or care their den mother was a lesbian — at least not until the Boy Scouts of America threw her out over the organization's ban on gays.

Now parents who were aware of Jennifer Tyrell's sexual orientation well before she took the boys on campouts and helped them carve race cars have rallied to her defense in a case that has re-ignited the debate over the Scouts' policy.

"She wasn't trying to hide anything," said Rob Dunn, a father in Bridgeport, a village of about 2,000 across the Ohio River from Wheeling, W.Va.

Male scout leaders who are gay have long been barred, but instances of women being excluded are not well-documented and probably rare.

The Boy Scouts of America, whose oath calls for members to be "morally straight," maintains that as a private organization it has the right to exclude gays and atheists. That stance was upheld by the U.S.

Jennifer Tyrell, left, led the Boy Scout troop her son, Cruz Burns, was a part of.

Supreme Court in 2000 but has led many state and local governments to deny support for the Scouts.

Male scout leaders who are gay have long been barred, but instances of women being excluded are not well-documented and probably are rare. Because of the policy, Tyrell said she only reluctantly allowed her 7-year-old son to join up in Bridgeport, where she lives with her partner and their four children. Told, she said, by the local cub master that it didn't matter that she is a lesbian, she was drafted to lead the pack in September.

Tyrell told parents at their first meeting about her sexual orientation. She said she was removed in April after the Boy Scouts told her to resign because she is gay.

"In this case, the policy was understood by her and her fellow volunteers but not followed," said Deron Smith, a spokesman for the Boy Scouts of America.

A Post-Cancer Prescription

The American Cancer Society officials have long encouraged healthy eating and exercise as a way to prevent certain cancers. Now they're taking it a step further. Based on research, new guidelines out Thursday urge doctors to talk to cancer survivors about eating right, exercising and slimming down if they're too heavy, saying there's strong evidence that both habits may help prevent the disease from coming back. In Verdicts, a Warning to Tyrants

Landmark ruling convicts ex-Liberian leader of war crimes

Leidschendam, Netherlands

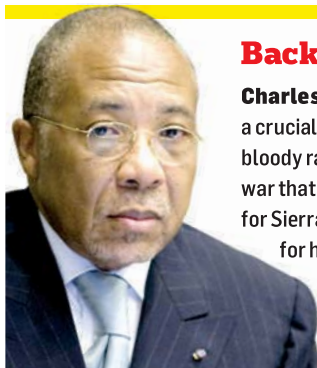

Former Liberian president Charles Taylor on Thursday became the first head of state since World War II convicted by an international war crimes court, a legal landmark observers say sent a clear message to tyrants around the world that their days of impunity are numbered.

Taylor, 64, was found guilty on 11 counts of war crimes and crimes against humanity for sending guns and bullets to Sierra Leone rebels in return for so-called blood diamonds mined by slave laborers and smuggled across the border.

He said nothing in court and showed no emotion as he was convicted.

The verdicts were hailed by prosecutors, victims and rights activists as a watershed moment in efforts to end impunity for leaders responsible for atrocities.

"This is a bell that has been

Backstory

Charles Taylor, while president of Liberia, played a crucial role in allowing rebels to continue a bloody rampage during Sierra Leone's 11-year civil war that ended in 2002, judges at the Special Court for Sierra Leone said. The rebels gained notoriety for hacking off the limbs of their enemies and carving their groups' initials into opponents and even children they kidnapped and turned into killers. (AP)

Who's Next?

International efforts to prosecute leaders have been spotty at best, but here's a look at some figures that prosecutors could pursue:

BASHAR ASSAD

Syria's president is widely accused of atrocities, but the prospect of him being indicted soon is unlikely.

OMAR AL-BASHIR

The Sudanese president is openly defying attempts to arrest him on international genocide charges.

LAURENT GBAGBO

rung and clearly rings throughout the world," said David Crane, the former prosecutor who indicted Taylor in 2003. "If you are a head of state and you are killing your own people you could be next."

U.N. Secretary General Ban Ki-moon also hailed the judgment as "a significant milestone," said U.N. deputy spokesman Eduardo del Buey.

Despite Thursday's optimism, international efforts to prosecute leaders have been spotty so far at best, and the global implications meant little to survivors of the war in Sierra Leone who celebrated Taylor's conviction.

"I am happy that the truth has come out ... that Charles Taylor is fully and solely responsible for the crimes committed against the people of Sierra Leone," said Jusu Jarka, who lost both arms during the fighting in 1999 and now runs an organization for amputees.

In Freetown, the capital, crowds that had gathered to watch the verdicts live on television sighed with relief when the conviction was announced.

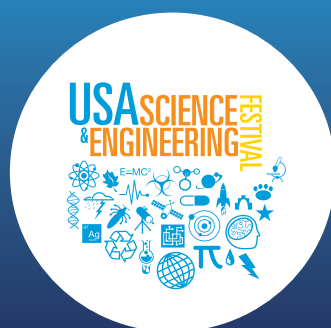

Edward Songo Conteh was in court to watch the verdicts. His only regret was that Taylor was not immediately sentenced. That will happen next month.

The court has no death penalty and no maximum sentence.

"I want to see this man behind bars for the rest of his life," said Conteh, who had one of his hands hacked off by child soldiers.

Pakistani Court Convicts PM Of Contempt

Islamabad

Pakistan's Supreme Court convicted the prime minister of contempt on Thursday but handed him a symbolic sentence of less than a minute's detention, allowing him to leave the building still in power.

The ruling against Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gilani triggered renewed political turmoil and could lead to his dismissal in the coming months. The tensions risk consuming a government already burdened with major economic and security challenges. (AP)

Murdoch Offers Apology Over Phone Hacking

London

Rupert Murdoch, 81, expressed regret Thursday for his failure to halt what he called "a cover-up" at his News of the World tabloid over the phone-hacking scandal engulfing his media empire.

Testifying for a second day at a U.K. inquiry into press ethics, the News Corp. chief said the extent of hacking had been hidden from him and his senior executives.

"All I can do is apologize to a lot of people," he said. "I also have to say I failed, and I am very sorry about it." (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Norway Sings in Defiance of Confessed Killer

LIEN KYRRE/AFPIGETTY IMAGES

THOUSANDS OF NORWEGIANS GATHER Thursday in Oslo, Norway, to sing "Children of the Rainbow," a tune that confessed mass killer Anders Behring Breivik said last week has been used to brainwash the country's youth. More than 40,000 people participated in the Oslo protest. Breivik has been on trial for the July 22 massacre of 77 people last year.

Experts Discredit N. Korea's Show of Force

Missiles trotted out by military simply fakes, analysts say

Tokyo

Analysts who have studied photos of ominous new North Korean missiles showcased recently at a lavish military parade say they were fakes, and not very convincing, casting further doubt on the country's claims of military prowess.

Since its recent rocket launch failure, Pyongyang's military leaders have made several boastful statements about its capabilities. On Wednesday, Vice Marshal Ri Yong Ho claimed his country is Backstory ...

North Korea's missiles, called KN-08s, were loaded onto the largest mobile launch vehicles Pyongyang has ever unveiled. The unveiling created an international stir. The missiles appeared to be new and designed for long-range attacks. That's a big concern because North Korea has long been suspected of trying to field an intercontinental ballistic missile, or ICBM, capable of reaching the U.S. But the weapons displayed April 15 appear to be a mishmash of components that could never fly together, and they didn't even fit the launchers they were carried on. (AP) capable of defeating the U.S. "at a single blow." And Monday, North Korea promised "special actions" that would reduce Seoul's government to ashes within minutes.

"There is no doubt that these missiles were mock-ups," Markus Schiller and Robert Schmucker, of Germany's Schmucker Technologie, wrote in a paper posted online.

North Korea often overstates its military capabilities, but the missiles displayed this month might foreshadow weapons it is working on.

Physicist David Wright noted that the first signs the outside world got of North Korea's long-range Taepodong-2 missile — upon which the recent failed rocket was based — was from mock-ups seen in 1994, 12 years before it was actually tested on the launch pad.

But Theodore Postol, a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, called the recent unveiling simply a smoke screen.

"The only way North Korea could develop such a missile with its pitiful economy would be if someone gave it to them," he said.

trucks are, and always will be, as big a part of the fabric of this nation as baseball and apple pie."

I'd argue that it's these folks who don't get it. Reducing the number of car trips doesn't mean eradicating the automobile (just as cutting obesity doesn't mean saying goodbye to delicious apple pie). Tourists are already biking not only to restaurants but to all of D.C.'s destinations thanks to the rapidly expanding Capital Bikes program, which finally managed to install some stations on the Mall. Seriously, my — pregnant! — friend visiting last week got around exclusively with CaBi.

By Vicky Hallett

And Kathy, honey, you're exhibiting a fundamental lack of understanding of public transportation. Many seniors and disabled people can't drive cars, so they need trains, buses and Washington's future streetcar network more than any of us.

Granted, the current system has some accessibility issues (along with quite a few other issues, as the derailment this week reminded us). A recent study by ergonomics consultants Alison G. Vredenburg and Ilene B. Zackowitz — and highlighted by the local blog Hellonwheelz.org, which is devoted to disabled Metro rider advocacy — noted the potential headaches caused by broken elevators, no place to secure wheelchairs on trains and the wide gaps between the platforms and trains.

The fixes to these problems aren't going to arrive in a car. But hopefully, they'll come via time machine. Over the next 20 years, the city and WMATA and all of us will have to make changes to bring this sustainable vision to life.

Future Perfect

Mayor Vincent Gray invited everyone aboard his time machine on Tuesday to check out a "Vision for a Sustainable D.C." By the year 2032, if all goes according to this plan, we'll have cut our obesity rate, energy consumption and greenhouse gas emissions all by 50 percent, attracted 250,000 new residents and made every D.C. waterway fishable and swimmable.

Of course, the part of the strategy to turn Washington into the "healthiest, greenest and most livable city" in the country that caught my attention was the transportation goal: 75 percent of all trips made by walking, biking or transit. That doesn't seem so out there to me — most of my friends already hit that number, and if people don't, it's an awesome aspiration.

But several commenters at Washingtonpost.com think the idea is just nuts. "And how do tourists — especially retired couples, disabled people and families who drive their cars to get to the nation's capital — fit into this vision of D.C. without cars?" asked Kathy8. "Which tourists are going to bike to a restaurant?" wondered 8-Man2. And that charmer junkie4politics opined: "This city just doesn't get it that no matter what they say or do, cars and

Rider Pleas Can't Halt Fare Hike

Metro board OKs higher rates set to go into effect in July

Washington

Pleas from riders Thursday could not hold off an across-the-board hike in Metro's parking fees and bus and rail fares, as the board of directors adopted new fares to help overcome a deficit in the transit authority's next budget.

The changes are scheduled to go into effect July 1. Riders packed the boardroom at Metro's headquarters Thursday to speak out against the increases, and the discussion during the public comment period centered on fares for MetroAccess, the transit authority's service for the disabled.

The maximum charge for MetroAccess will remain $7. However, many of those riders will experience increases because fares are calculated using bus and train rates. The increase averages about 5 percent on rail, although the actual amounts would vary depending on distance. Bus fares increase by a dime, rising to $1.60 for those who use electronic SmarTrip cards.

Metro's base peak fare for rail riders would increase from $1.95 to $2.10. The maximum peak fare would increase from $5 to $5.75.

Meanwhile...

Advocates for the disabled said they were disappointed that the MetroAccess fare structure wasn't simplified and made more affordable. "We go to meeting after meeting to plead for you not to raise our fares," Lois Staves, 62, of Fort Washington, told the board. "We have rights to be mobile. You take away our mobility. You crush our spirit. If you are on a fixed income you're just stuck." Board members discussed the possibility of raising bus and rail fares and holding off on any action that would affect MetroAccess until the rates could be studied further. (TWP)

The base off-peak rail fare would increase from $1.60 to $1.70. The maximum off-peak fare would be $3.50. Parking fees at Metro lots and garages would rise by 25 cents. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Maryland Live! to Launch June 6

Hanover, Md.

Maryland Live!, the state's largest planned slots casino, is set to open its doors on the night of June 6, the project's developer said Thursday.

The launch of the $500 million facility in Anne Arundel County will mark a key milestone in Maryland's gambling program, which has suffered multiple delays and generated significantly less revenue for the state than first projected.

Maryland Live!, developed by the Baltimore-based Cordish Cos., is set to open at Arundel Mills mall with 3,200 slot machines and electronic table games, more than double the offerings of either of the first two casinos to open in the state.

3,200

The number of slot machines and electronic table games planned to be featured at Maryland Live!, which opens June 6, officials say.

By this fall, Cordish says the number of machines will grow to 4,750, making it one of the large-est casinos of its kind in the country. The facility will also include a half-dozen new restaurants and a live music venue.

Besides touting what they called a "world-class gaming experience," Cordish officials also said Thursday that they hope the opening will influence the debate in Annapolis over whether to authorize a sixth casino in Maryland, which Cordish opposes. When fully operational, legislative analysts expect Maryland Live! to generate more than $400 million a year in revenue.

Cathedral Set To Restart Gargoyle Tours

Washington

Washington National Cathedral will be offering tours of its unique stone carvings for the first time since the building was damaged by an earthquake last year.

Tours exploring more than 100 gargoyles perched on the cathedral's facade will begin again on Sunday at 2 p.m. The gargoyles include monsters, dogs and horses, as well as "Star Wars" villain Darth Vader.

The cathedral had been forced to suspend the tour, as well as other regular events, following a 5.8-magnitude earthquake on Aug. 23. The quake caused stonework to fall from the building's towers and other damage. The cathedral reopened to the public in November. (AP)

Hashtag Politics

Twitter has reshaped how campaigns distribute and refine their messages

Washington

The bully pulpit has a new kind of altar call: "Tweet them. We've got a hashtag. Here's the hashtag for you to tweet them: #dontdoublemyrate."

President Obama repeated that Twitter hashtag twice more during a Tuesday speech opposing an increase in student loan interest rates. For good measure, he even had his Chapel Hill, N.C., audience chant it back to him.

"Twitter has become the ultimate real-time engagement tool for our campaign."

—ZAC MOFFATT, DIGITAL DIRECTOR OF REPUBLICAN MITT ROMNEY'S CAMPAIGN

Within moments after Obama finished his remarks, Twitter users had written more than 20,000 posts containing "#dontdoublemyrate" — enough for Twitter to declare it a Top 10 worldwide "trending topic."

The six-year-old microblogging site came into its own this presidential cycle, but the past few weeks have demonstrated how clearly it has become the tool of choice for getting something into the political bloodstream.

That the president is now incorporating hashtags into his speeches shows how Twitter is redefining the means by which politicians shape, distribute and refine their messages. Campaigning in 140 characters or less provides almost instant feedback, which campaigns

Twitter is dwarfed in size by Facebook, with 24 million active U.S. users at the end of last year, compared with nearly 133 million for Facebook, according to an estimate by the research firm eMarketer. But it is growing more than twice as fast, at 31.9 percent last year. (TWP) use to figure out what is working and what isn't, even before it hits the blogs, much less the traditional media outlets.

But as both sides are learning, once they enter the Twitterverse, the digital currents can sweep in many directions.

In the past, for instance, Mitt Romney's campaign might have sent out a mass e-mail to protest if a Democratic cable television pundit accused the candidate's wife of never working a day in her life. And quite likely, it would have sunk without a ripple.

But when that happened at 8:43 p.m. on April 11, Ann Romney issued her first tweet: "I made a choice to stay home and raise five boys. Believe me, it was hard work." And it caused a sensation that threw the Democrats on the defensive on women's issues.

Where almost no one on Twitter

Starting a Trend

#DogGatePartI

A long-gestating story about an ill-fated family trip Mitt Romney took with his dog attached to the roof of his car slowly picked up steam on Twitter and elsewhere, most notably when a New Yorker cover featuring Rick Santorum in the doghouse atop a car hit Twitter.

#SmokingGate

#SketchAGate

Romney communications director Eric Fehrstrom said March 21 on CNN that Romney would "hit a reset button" in the general election. "It's almost like an Etch a Sketch," he said. Romney's opponents pounced: Etch a Sketch went viral.

#MommyGate

After Democratic strategist Hilary Rosen said on CNN that stay-at-home mom and potential first lady Ann Romney hadn't worked a day in her life, Romney took to Twitter on April 11 to defend the work of motherhood, setting the topic abuzz.

#DogGatePartII

In the past week, a tweeted link to a story about President Obama eating dog meat as a child in Indonesia — which Obama told in his 1995 autobiography — gave Romney's campaign a chance at some tweeted payback for the heat he'd taken over his ill-fated family trip. (EXPRESS)

Officially Onboard

In the early months of the Obama administration, White House officials were leery of Twitter, in no small part because of concerns about how the freewheeling environment of social media would mesh with the requirements of the Presidential Records Act, which mandates that all the traffic end up in the National Archives. Only when officials noticed how many White House reporters were using it did they realize that "we were missing an opportunity," said former deputy press secretary Bill Burton, one of the early advocates of official White House Twitter accounts. (TWP)

ter had been mentioning Ann Romney or the strategist Hilary Rosen's name when Rosen made her comment on CNN, the number quickly jumped to more than 150 tweets per minute. And by noon the next day, more than 2,800 Twitter users had sent Ann Romney's tweet on to tens of thousands of followers.

What gives Twitter its outsize influence in politics is not how many users it has but who those users are — journalists, elected officials, campaign operatives.

"Every single thing we do, there's a tweet button next to it," said Katie Hogan, a spokeswoman for Obama's campaign. "We can now reach not only our supporters, but our supporters can drive the message, too."

It makes the pace of earlier rapid-response efforts, such as the vaunted 1992 Bill Clinton "war room," seem almost glacial.

Twitter has also changed the tenor of the debate, with candidates and campaign operatives posting edgy things there that would not likely dare to posit if, say, they were sitting in front of a television camera — exchanges that do not exactly represent an elevation of the level of political discourse.

But the Twitterization of politics also represents a breakthrough, giving ordinary people a chance to be part of the political conversation in a way they never have before.

Capitals players celebrate with Joel Ward, center, after Ward scored the game-winning goal to win the series against Boston.

'We Needed It'

Capitals show things are different this year with Game 7 victory

The Capitals

The sound of relief could be heard in General Manager George McPhee's voice after the Capitals' Game 7 overtime victory over the Boston Bruins on Wednesday.

A Joel Ward goal advanced the Capitals out of the first round and completed what seemed to be an impossible feat of topping the Stanley Cup champions in a do-or-die situation.

"We needed to win a series like this; this franchise needed it," he said. "Boston's a fabulous organization. ... We played them as hard as we could. I don't know how we did it, but it was nice to see that go in. We needed it."

'Unforgivable' Tweets

The NHL may have more than two dozen black players, but that fact was lost in the torrent of racist tweets targeted at Joel Ward after his overtime goal for the Capitals eliminated the Boston Bruins from the playoffs Wednesday night. Many of the tweets were fired off in the heat of the moment after the game ended. Many were later deleted. Some have stepped forward and apologized for their tweets. The troubling cyberpatter, which Capitals owner Ted Leonsis called "unforgivable," was not the first racial incident in the NHL this season. In September, in a preseason game featuring the Philadelphia Flyers in London, Ontario, a fan threw a banana peel onto the ice, missing the Flyers' black forward Wayne Simmonds. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

In the past the Capitals have fallen flat — or, to put it bluntly, choked — in Game 7s. But on Wednesday night, a seismic shift occurred in the Capitals' world.

Though they carried the weight of past seasons' failures on their shoulders, the Caps proved they have changed from those days.

Instead of being the victim of one mistake, the Caps capitalized on a failed clear by Boston's Benoit Pouliot to score the series-clinching goal. Instead of trying to use offense to defeat the Bruins, the Caps grinded out four one-goal wins. And instead of relying on Alexander Ovechkin to carry the offense, it was players such as Matt Hendricks who came up big.

Against Boston, the Capitals proved they can play playoff hockey.

"To have seven one-goal games and four overtime games, this certainly was the best, most competitive series since I've owned the team."

— TED LEONSIS, ON THE EXCITING NATURE OF THE CAPS' SERIES WIN OVER THE BRUINS.

"This system seems to be the right system to play in the playoffs," Capitals owner Ted Leonsis said.

Washington's 4-3 series win over Boston also vindicates many of the changes the Capitals made over the past season. In late November, the Capitals fired coach Bruce Boudreau and opted for the defensively minded Dale Hunter, but the impact of the change wasn't seen until the last month of the season.

Hunter's team struggled to shed some characteristics of Boudreau's squads, and some wondered if Hunter would even return as coach if the Capitals missed the playoffs. Then the Caps bought in.

The dump-and-chase style helped the Capitals clinch the seventh seed in the NHL playoffs. Against Boston, Hunter's rougher style of play seemed to take the Bruins by surprise early on and translated into success.

But reaching the second round isn't the goal for the Capitals. They outplayed the New York Rangers last season in the first round, only to lose in four games to the Tampa Bay Lightning. That's what Leonsis hopes to avoid this year.

"We got through the first round, we did that last year," he said. "So there's relief and joy but there's a lot of work left to do. I'll think we improved over last year if we can get through the second round. That's the goal year after year."

Pontius Scores Big at Forward

United star earns playing time with recent strong efforts

Major League Soccer

The way things are going for D.C. United right now, players have to seize their opportunities when they get on the field. The competition, especially in the midfield and at forward, is fierce enough to the point that familiar stars such as Chris Pontius and Andy Najar are having trouble finding a regular place in the lineup.

Over the past few weeks, Pontius has taken matters into his own

There are numerous links between D.C. United and the Houston Dynamo, who will meet Saturday at RFK Stadium. Dwayne De Rosario won an MLS Cup MVP award while playing for Houston in 2007, and D.C. assistant coach Pat Onstad also played a major role for Houston's championship teams in 2006 and 2007 as starting goalkeeper. chomping at the bit," Olsen said. "With all the subs that we want to get on the field, you have to take advantage of your opportunities."

With the emergence of rookie Nick DeLeon as a consistent threat at Pontius' left wing position, the fourth-year attacker has had to reinvent himself as a forward. He's done so successfully, with four goals in his last three games, including a game-winning goal off the bench against New England and his first career hat trick in Sunday's 4-1 win over the New York Red Bulls. He was named Major League Soccer's player of the week on Monday.

Playing forward is not new to Pontius. He spent time up top during his rookie season and accounted for four goals and three assists, but he had made a home for himself on the left wing and had his best professional season there in 2011 before breaking his leg in September.

Pontius' confidence is high, but that doesn't mean his place in the lineup is a given. Not with the in-house competition pushing players on a weekly basis. "I'm just happy to be back on the field playing with the guys," Pontius said. "It's good to be hitting some form again ... I want to keep this going."

Zimmermann Takes No Offense

Nats pitcher doesn't complain about his lack of run support

The Nationals

For most of Jordan Zimmermann's career in D.C., he's been the resident tough-luck pitcher, dominant on his own but so often undone by the failure of his teammates to score runs for him.

But don't expect Zimmermann to cry about it. He knows about bad luck, and that ain't it. This is a guy whose face was shattered in college by a screaming line drive — during batting practice. He didn't complain. He went out and pitched — with his jaw wired shut.

Last season, in his first full year with the Nationals, Zimmermann's 3.18 ERA was 10th best among National League starters, but his 8-11 record proved he couldn't do it by himself. The Nationals averaged 4.8 runs in Zimmermann's starts, meaning only four National League starters got less run support.

This year didn't start off any better. Washington (14-4 entering Thursday's game), which visits the Los Angeles Dodgers this weekend, didn't score more than three runs in any of his first three starts, though the team won two of them.

"He hasn't been getting hardly any [run support] at all, but he keeps pitching like that, he's going to get a whole bunch of wins," manager Davey Johnson said last week after Zimmermann allowed only

His Own Best Friend

On Wednesday in San Diego, hard-luck pitcher Jordan Zimmermann didn't leave anything to chance, giving himself a two-run lead with an RBI single and holding the Padres to a single run over six innings. He kept them down long enough for the Nationals to break out with a five-run seventh inning. Zimmermann's ERA actually went up — to 1.33 — but he notched his first win of the season. Of course, the Nationals scoring outburst came after Zimmermann had been lifted for a pinch hitter. "I had to get Zim out of there," Nats manager Davey Johnson quipped. "We can't score when he's pitching." (D.T.)

a single run in seven innings, but didn't get the victory.

Still, for all anyone knew, Zimmermann (1-1, 1.33 ERA) might still have been pitching with his jaw wired. His demeanor on the mound rarely changes, whether he's just struck out the side or given up a home run. "A bulldog" is Johnson's favored term. "I just try to go out there and battle and keep the team in the game as long as I possibly can," Zimmermann Gone for Good?

Have NFL fans seen the last of the Pro Bowl? The game could be suspended next year, two people familiar with discussions said Thursday. Responding to an ESPN report that commissioner Roger Goodell is "strongly considering" suspending the typically lackluster All-Star game in 2013, NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said: "No determination has been made yet." Bargains Over the Brookland Bridge

A neighborhood vibe blossoms in Northeast

Hot Hoods

There's a neighborhood in the District, just a short Metro ride from downtown, known for community, diversity and, best of all, surprisingly affordable home prices.

This is Brookland. Its quiet, shady streets and single-family homes with yards have long been popular with families, gardeners and nature-lovers, not to mention the 3,000 students at nearby Catholic University.

With home prices shooting up in D.C., the neighborhood's affordability is drawing more home buyers to Brookland.

It's also a straight shot from downtown by car or bike. Just head northeast along Rhode Island Avenue and across a small bridge to 9th Street NE. You can ride Metro's Red Line from downtown to Brookland-CUA Station in roughly 20 minutes.

Once they move in, residents find even more to love, including a strong sense of neighborhood pride.

"We wanted to pick a community we could engage with," says Tom Bridge, an IT consultant who moved to Brookland two years ago.

These days, the once-sleepy streetcar suburb is changing (though not without some growing pains).

New retail and residential developments near the Brookland Metro and at nearby Rhode Island Avenue Metro are making the neighborhood more attractive to younger buyers. According to Zillow.com's Home Value Index, recent prices for Brookland condos of all sizes averaged $302,000, about $50,000 less than in Petworth and more than $100,000 less than in Columbia Heights.

For those prices, you miss out on a few amenities. The neighborhood's retail options consist of a few sit-down restaurants, pizza and wings takeouts, and greasy spoons. "I miss U Street and some of the convenience of having all those choices [of restaurants and shops] in really close proximity," says Geraldine, 33, who did not want her last name published.

A short commute to downtown D.C. — the Metro ride is only about 20 minutes — has been luring younger buyers to Brookland.

Geraldine lives at the Chancellor's Row at Brookland Metro (627 Regent Place NE; 202-290-3794, Eya.com), which broke ground in 2010 and offers three- and four-bedroom, LEED-certified row homes starting at $343,000.

On the other end of the price spectrum is Oak Terrace (3719 12th St. NE; 202-529-2420), an older building where a one-bedroom recently sold for $122,000. The Brooklander (1218 Perry St. NE; 301-513-9300) also offers attractive deals, like a one-bedroom condo that assessed for $220,000.

Value is what draws most buyers to Brookland. Long and Foster Realtor Tanya Slade has seen this firsthand. "I think a lot of people who are transitioning from other cities recognize how expensive it is to be near a Metro [station]. And then they find their way to Brookland and realize, 'Wow, I can be on the Metro and live in my smaller condo, and I'll still be in the city.'"

Tom Bridge calls buying a home in Brookland "easily the best decision we made."

Buyers on a budget who want to remain in D.C. proper "definitely have to come to the east side of North Capitol," says Slade.

Unlike other Northeast neighborhoods, Brookland combines low prices with accessibility to transit. As for restaurants and services, there is slow but steady growth. An upscale bar, the Brookland Café (3740 12th St. NE; 202-635-6307, Thebrooklandcafe.com), opened a few years ago, and the neighborhood recently welcomed its first cupcake shop (Divinely Decadent Desserts; 2701 12th St. NE, 202-450-1953, Thedivinedessert.com). Menomale Pizza Napoletana and Craft Beer (2711 12th St. NE; 202-248-3946, Menomale.us) is scheduled to open later in 2012.

Dance Place (3225 8th St. NE; 202-269-1600, Danceplace.org) offers performances and classes just a few blocks from the Metro station, and residents tout the recently renovated Turkey Thicket Recreation Center (1100 Michigan Ave. NE; 202-576-9236, App.dpr.dc.gov) as a "hidden gem" with a 25-meter swimming pool. Brookland's Langdon Dog Park (2901 20th Street NE) is one of the largest parks in the entire District. The Woodridge Neighborhood Library (1801 Hamlin St. NE; 202-541-6226, Dclibrary.org/woodridge), which serves much of Brookland, is scheduled to be renovated, with assistance from the firm that designed the new Arena Stage.

The Metropolitan Branch Trail (Metbranchtrail.com), which links Silver Spring with Union Station, runs right through the heart of the neighborhood, following the Metro tracks. You can enter the trail at 7th and Franklin Streets NE.

While neither is technically located within the bounds of Brookland, both of D.C.'s new breweries — D.C. Brau and Chocolate City — have opened up shop in Northeast, so growlers of fresh beer are just a stone's throw away.

"I'm for the most part very excited about what's coming down the pipe," Bridge says of the new developments. "Brookland is a rising star."

Bridge's and his wife's decision to move to Brookland, he says, was "easily the best decision we made."

The cousins aren't fans of granite or marble countertops, which they say can be porous and gather bacteria. They prefer to use newer, stronger materials like quartz, which requires less upkeep over the years.

Renovating Relatives

John Colaneri of HGTV's "Kitchen Cousins" creates spaces worthy of the family meal

John Colaneri and Anthony Carrino aren't afraid to tear down walls or rip up floors to turn outdated, problem kitchens into meal-worthy spaces. The pair, who run a New Jersey-based family construction company, show off their demo and design skills on HGTV's "Kitchen Cousins." The second season premieres May 2 at 9:30 p.m. We spoke with Colaneri about easy kitchen fixes, his aversion to trends and surviving a renovation.

What are some of the current trends for kitchens?

Everyone always asks us that, but Anthony and I, in all honesty, don't follow trends. We like to do and create our own ideas. But something a lot of people are doing is incorporating traditional style with contemporary style, sort of mixing the two. You can do that in many different ways. Maybe you have a more traditional countertop and a backsplash that has a more contemporary feel, or maybe cabinets with a more contemporary feel and lighting with a more traditional or rustic look. People want to make their kitchens unique.

Are there any alternatives to the ubiquitous granite countertops?

On "Kitchen Cousins," we talk about this with a lot of our clients. Nine times out of 10, they want granite or marble. And the first thing we say is, "That's out." It's an old design trend, and those are older and inferior materials to what's new now. What we love to use is a quartz material. There are a lot of different suppliers; we use Caesarstone, Zodiaq, Silestone. It's a phenomenal and much superior product that's 100 percent nonporous.

When you buy a granite countertop — and it doesn't matter what grade it is — it's porous. You have to seal it every six months. If you don't seal it, you can have bacteria that can grow underneath the countertops that you never really see. When you have a quartz countertop, once it's installed you never have to worry about it again.

What do you consider the toughest kitchen problems to tackle?

One of the major issues is that a lot of older homes have really poor electrical and plumbing. We've been doing this for so long that we totally take everything out and start over

A Lease With a Leash

Make your cats and dogs just as happy as you are in a pet-friendly apartment

Lifestyle

When Allie Hagan, 25, went apartment-hunting, she was looking for the usual stuff: the right neighborhood and the right price. That's not as easy as you might think when your roommate is a 50-pound German shepherd-Labrador mix named Freckles.

Owning a pet in the city is no easy task, but finding a landlord who is willing to rent to you and your four-legged friend can be even more challenging. Pets can scratch, rip and tear walls and furniture, and to put it politely, they "have accidents." All of this can mean costly repairs for landlords.

As a result, only about half of nationwide rentals are pet-friendly, and most of those include significant restrictions on the size and breed of the animal, says Josh Franks, executive director of the Foundation for Interdisciplinary Research and Education Promoting Animal Welfare, a Houston-based nonprofit that educates the public on animal welfare issues.

Of the pet-friendly housing available, more buildings allow cats than dogs. It's especially difficult to find a home if you own a dog that weighs more than 40 pounds. But it's not impossible.

Hagan found a building in Capitol Hill owned by a small management company, with a yard out back and a dog park for Freckles right down the street.

Franks says renters with pets may have better luck leasing from small companies or private owners. “Independent landlords might have more ability to talk and negotiate than large complexes, which tend to have a pet policy set in place. So if you have a very large dog, you might be better off negotiating with a private owner,” says Franks.

Renting With Pets

Even in larger buildings, more landlords are starting to figure out how to turn pets into a financial boon: They charge pet rent.

“There has definitely been a big increase in rentals that allow pets. [Landlords] just see that it’s good revenue for them,” says Alex Dobrow, president of People With Pets (Peoplewithpets.com), a website dedicated to easing the housing search for pet owners across the country.

Pet owners in the D.C. area can expect to pay between $10 and $50 in pet rent each month, says Dobrow. Most animal-friendly rentals also charge a non-refundable pet deposit, which can range anywhere from $50 to several hundred dollars. That’s typically in addition to your refundable security deposit.

Foundry Lofts (301 Tingey St. SE, 866-205-5860, Foundryloftsdc.com), an upscale industrial apartment building in Southeast D.C., is one of the few large complexes in the city that doesn’t restrict the size of your pet. They charge a one-time, $500 nonrefundable pet fee and $50 a month in pet rent for

A Walker to Remember

Love your dog, but have a job? Professionals with pets often turn to dog walkers to give their pooches daily exercise and a midday dose of attention.

“Exercise not only ensures greater mental and psychological health for the pets, but also reduces the likelihood of them causing damage to the home from nervous energy,” said Paul Mann, CEO and founder of Fetch! Pet Care (Fetchpetcare.com), which has locations in D.C. and Maryland.

Many reputable walkers advertise at vets’ offices or pet-friendly shops around town. An Internet search will turn up an abundance of good leads.

Look for sitters who are bonded, licensed and insured. “Ask what their safety protocols are,” says Josh Smirollo, a co-owner of Waggy Walkys (<http://waggywalkys.com>), which offers walking services in D.C., Maryland and Virginia. Smirollo also recommends asking prospective walkers for references and finding out how long they have been in business to avoid “fly-by-nighters.”

Many walking services start off with an in-home consultation, so the walker can meet the pet and learn about his or her routine.

Most pet owners give the dog walker a spare key to get in during the day or leave a key with the doorman if they have one, Mann said. A.M.

cats or dogs.

“We’ve decided to allow large dogs here because we have the Yards Park behind us and there is a little doggy park there as well,” says assistant manager Sarah Swart. “People like to walk dogs around here, so offering the larger breed is definitely something that is appealing.”

Pet owners need to think about more than dog parks when renting in the city. In tight urban quarters, a pet’s indoor behavior can affect neighbors.

Getting to know your neighbors is critical to preventing future conflicts, says Nicola Whiteman, vice president of government affairs in the D.C. Apartment and Office Building Association of Metropolitan Washington.

That’s a lesson Allie Hagan learned quickly. Even exercise in the nearby dog park didn’t stop Freckles from getting restless while Hagan was at work. “My neighbor downstairs told me my dog was being loud during the day sometimes,” she says. It turned out there was a simple fix. “I found out she just needed more toys during the work day.”

Another easy fix for noisy pets: Consider area rugs or carpeted apartments to absorb the sound of your pet scampering over the floor, Whiteman says.

For energetic pups, walking services are another option to help them get rid of that extra energy, particularly if you work long days, says Whiteman.

If you’re planning to adopt a pet, think ahead about its needs. Before Alyssa Montchal, 24, brought home a cat, she checked with her landlord to make sure she was abiding by her building’s pet policy. She also bought scratching posts to prevent scratches on the walls or furniture.

“Be proactive and think about what your animal might get in to,” she says.

Montchal grew up with pets and missed having them when she moved to D.C. Still, she thought long and hard about whether she was ready for a pet before adopting her Calico/Tabby mix.

“I lived in my previous place about three months before I went ahead and got an animal to make sure I was secure in my own life and able to handle it,” she says.

new. We don't mix and match and try to use what's there. We've seen a lot of cases where there are a lot of fire hazards behind the walls that are really huge potential problems, and the people living there for many years never knew.

What are some of the easiest fixes that a handy homeowner could address him- or herself?

A backsplash is very easy; it's really just kind of a weekend project. You can go to any of your local hardware stores or a tile supply house and find hundreds of different tiles. Some even come on 12 by 12 inch sheets that are very easy to put up. All you need is some thin-set [mortar], a trowel and the tile. You can also easily change out a couple of pendant lights or a chandelier; it's very easy to do and will definitely change your kitchen. You can also change out the hardware on your doors.

How do you know what to leave to the professionals?

I'm for people doing their own projects, but they really shouldn't get involved in any of the heavy mechanical, plumbing or main electrical components. They might think they saw it on TV or someone told them how to do it, but if they do it incorrectly, it could cause some severe problems. When you leave it to the pros, they know what's up to code and what's right from wrong.

What can an updated kitchen add to the value of your home?

What we're seeing right now,

"Anthony and I, in all honesty, don't follow trends. We like to do and create our own ideas."

— JOHN COLANERI, LEFT, WHO WITH HIS COUSIN ANTHONY CARRINO, RIGHT, TURNS BLAH KITCHENS INTO BEAUTIFUL MODERN SPACES ON HGTV'S "KITCHEN COUSINS." THE SHOW'S SECOND SEASON PREMIERES ON MAY 2 AT 9:30 P.M.

because the real estate market hasn't been good, is that a lot of people instead of trying to move are putting more equity back into where they live, which we think is a great idea. It's better to update your home and actually enjoy it while you're living there. And if you're looking to get that equity and make your house attractive, the kitchen is the first place to do it. It's always said that kitchens and baths are what sell a house.

If you're renovating before putting your home on the market, what should you be sure to do?

A lot of times people say they're only going to do the cabinets, not the countertops. They try to kind of piecemeal it together. What we tell people is that if you're going to have a renovation and do your kitchen over, really make sure that it's cohesive. You don't want your kitchen to look like it's been thrown together. And you often end up, in the end, spending more money than if you did everything at once.

What's the key to surviving a kitchen renovation?

Expect the unexpected. If you open up the walls, I will guarantee that nine times out of 10 you will find something you never thought was there. If you're budgeting out for any project, you should always have a contingency. If the project is going to cost $40,000, have a 5 percent contingency for things you don't know or for something that doesn't go as planned. In construction, you always have something that comes up that's going to cost you more money in the end. If you're prepared for it in the beginning, it makes issues much easier to handle.

How can homebuyers see the potential in an ugly kitchen?

Don't just look at the ugly cabinets or floors; all of that stuff can easily come out. Look at the overall design of the house. If the kitchen lends itself to where you can knock down a couple of non-load-bearing walls and you can open the kitchen up to the living room or dining room, the possibilities are endless. And if you can get a steal for a property, you can go in and, with the money you saved on the sale side, you can reinvest and put it back into the kitchen.

PRICE POINT COMPARING REAL ESTATE SALES IN AND AROUND THE DISTRICT$769,000*Palisades Detached house: 5212 MacArthur Blvd. NW

COURTESY COLDWELL BANKER

$769,000 This pre-Civil War two-bedroom, 2.5-bath home blends old and new. Just renovated, the house retains little of its rustic past except an old-timey exterior and the original front door. Crown molding and espresso-colored hardwood floors frame creamy white walls laden with windows that give the 1,174-square-foot space a clean, fresh feel. There's a laundry room, unfinished basement, backyard, shed and a driveway with room for two cars. The front porch and window-access-only balcony let owners sit back and watch MacArthur Boulevard's heavy traffic pass by. (LISTED BY WILLIAM SAWYER & CO.)

A Weekend of Open Houses

A national event offers househunters plenty of choices

Real Estate

Chalk it up to allergies: Spring makes people itchy to move. To help match buyers and sellers, Realtors' associations are sponsoring the third annual Nationwide Open House (Realtor.org/topics/nationwideopenhouse). On April 28 and 29, sellers across the country will open their homes, making it easier for buyers to check out multiple properties. Organizers expect

Landsman

3,100 open houses in the Mid-Atlantic region, with 215 in the District alone, according to the Multiple Listing Service. Members of the Northern Virginia Association of Realtors (NVAR) and the Greater Capital Area Association of Realtors are hosting in the D.C. area. We asked NVAR's Jill Landsman to help buyers navigate the terrain.

Why is this time of year busy for the real estate market?

People are planning ahead. They look to move 30, 60 or 90 days later and with the fact that schools close in June, people think, "Let's let our children finish out the school year and we'll move in the summer."

Is it really a good time to sell?

If you look at the real estate data in Northern Virginia, all the metrics are up. The only metric that's not really up a lot is number of houses on the market. We do have year-over-year gains in the number of homes sold and year-over-year gains in the average sale price, which is a trend that shows a positive local economy.

This weekend's Nationwide Open House opens lots of doors for home buyers.

Why hold an open house?

The main reason Realtors recommend an open house is to create traffic, and there is a good chance that people will have an opportunity to fall in love with a property and really know the neighborhood. You can go and do a virtual tour online any time of the day, but you're not getting a sense of the neighborhood.

With so many open houses, is it possible to overdo it?

If you looked at too many houses, at the end of the day, you're not going to remember. Make your list at the beginning of the day for which houses you want to tour and try and create a plan that makes sense to get to them so that you have a strategy and a logic to the sequence of the homes.

How else can buyers prepare?

Take notes and make sure you note what you liked and didn't like about a home. What each prospective buyer needs to do is study the neighborhood, and then if they really love what's available in the neighborhood, then you drill down on "Does this house meet my needs and requirements?" There's always going to have to be a little bit of compromise because nothing in life is perfect.

Sweetlife Fest Gurus

RESTAURATEURS, FESTIVAL ORGANIZERS

The three Georgetown grads behind Sweetgreen — the fast-casual restaurant now with 10-plus locations across the U.S. — are much more than salad slingers. The savvy foodpreneurs host their third, sold-out Sweetlife festival (SweetlifeFestival.com) tomorrow at Merriweather Post Pavilion with Avicii, Kid Cudi and the Shins headlining. Like their restaurants, the bash marries local eats with eco-practices. But as Nathaniel Ru, Nicolas Jammet and Jonathan Neman (left to right) prove, making healthy decisions doesn't mean sacrificing fun.

Have the three of you always had an interest in music?

NEMAN: Music has always been a big part of our lives. When we opened the original Sweetgreen, there was a huge debate over what song we'd play first. We went with Robot Rock by Daft Punk.

Where did you get the idea for the Sweetlife festival?

NEMAN: When we opened our second store, it wasn't doing very well. So we went to the Guitar Center and bought a big speaker and started DJing outside every weekend. It became more than just food: People got to know us and heard music they loved or had never heard before but liked. After a few block parties, we decided to throw a festival in our parking lot.

How will this year's festival be different from last year's?

RU: We're placing a greater emphasis on food. We've brought together our favorite chefs from the East Coast; people who love our mission. The "Food Forest" will give people the opportunity to eat local ingredients. And there will be hamburgers and hot dogs, but they're organic and from sources we trust.

NEMAN: Last year there was one stage, and this year there's two with more than 20 bands.

JAMMET: And this year there will be shuttles all over the city that will make getting to Merriweather Post Pavilion seamless.

"We're trying to show people they can drink organic beer ... and still have a good time at a rock concert."

Who would be your dream act?

JAMMET: LCD Soundsystem.

NEMAN: White Stripes.

RU: Daft Punk.

What measures are you taking to make the festival green?

JAMMET: There are solar panels on top of the stage. Everything will be compostable. You'll see "energy zones," like a huge seesaw that you can get on and charge your phone with the energy generated. And concertgoers can redeem trash they've collected for prizes like bottles of Honest Tea or a recycled wallet.

How did you manage to make collecting trash cool?

JAMMET: We try not to be preachy about our message of living the sweet life. It means making healthy decisions and having fun at the same time. We're trying to show people they can drink organic beer, eat a sustainable meal and still have a really good time at a rock concert.

Paging All Readers

AS MUCH AS WE LOVE BOOKS, the little bug-gers take up a lot more space than Kindles. With minimalism being all the rage right now (or is that just in our pint-size apartment?), Miron Li-or's I Conceal angled bookshelf ($35, Umbra.com) cures your storage woes. Mount the wooden wonder to your wall in a "W" or "7" formation, then store tomes on the hidden brackets. Now you can spend less time rearranging your space and more time, oh, finishing "Moby Dick."

Bun Times

WE'RE GOING TO TRY our hardest not to make any butt puns here.

Columbia Heights' Le Caprice D.C. Cafe and Bakery (3460 14th St. NW; 202-290-3109) has received raves for its we-must-be-in-France baguettes. And the hamburger buns aren't far behind. (Well, we tried). Similar to brioche, they're fluffy with a hint of oil and dusted with buttery sesame seeds. Grab a package ($5 for 6) on your way to a grill-out and be hailed a BBQ hero.

Hot to Trot

AND THEY'RE OFF. Almost. Next Saturday marks the 138th Kentucky Derby, and though we've heard horses can be found there, all eyes will be on the near-nauseating preppy attire. Vineyard Vines (1225 Wisconsin Ave. NW; 202-625-8463) helps you blend into the sea of seersucker with a limited-edition Kentucky Derby collection of suits for men (shown, $395) and silk horseshoe-print dresses for women ($285). A jockey shirt-print bow-tie ($50) would also go well with your fifth mint julep.

Fuzz Off

YOU DIDN'T SPEND ALL WINTER toning your calves at Spin class only to hide them beneath leg hair. And if you did, our bad. For everyone else there's Bliss' Wax to the Max set ($55, Blissworld.com). The multi-piece kit contains the same products used in the venerable salon and can be smeared on any pesky patches of facial or body hair. We can't promise it will be any less painful than at the salon, but at least you can wince in the privacy of your own home.

Grow Your Greens

THE AVERAGE DATE OF the last frost in D.C.? May 1. Which means you might, instead, want to plant veggies and herbs on a windowsill with Potting Shed's Creation's Grow Boxes ($40 each, Greencupboards.com). The slender metal containers come with bamboo water-catching saucers plus seeds for either sprouts (mustard, radish, chrysanthemum) or veggies (cabbage, mini carrot, tom-thumb pea).

Dear Manolo

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOE BLOGGER

I was recently promoted to an important job that requires I be presentable for the public. Because I work in a place with long hallways, can you recommend shoes that allow me to walk about comfortably while still looking professional? — ALLISON

Manolo says, oh how well the Manolo remembers that day at the shoe shop of the Mercurio Albornoz y Bahamonde when he was finally allowed to interact with the public.

The Manolo had begun his career in the back room of the shop, as the Second Assistant to the Associate Boot Black, working 10 hours each day keeping the shoeshine rags in good order, and handing the Associate Boot Black his brushes.

After only seven months the Manolo was promoted to the Sub-Director of Tissue Paper, responsible for helping the Director of the Boxing and Re-Boxing oversee the placement of the shoes into the boxes. It was in this role the Manolo finally encountered the customers.

The Manolo felt confident as he carried the bundles of fresh tissue paper to the stock boys in the front, because he knew all of the customers were admiring the beautiful two-tone, black-and-white spectator oxfords that the Manolo wore on that first day in his new position.

Such is the power of handsome and appropriate shoes!

Here is the Camelia from the Taryn Rose ($299, Zappos.com), the smart, comfortable pump with the little flowery cutout details.

Ask the Manolo a question at manolo@shoeblogs.com. Visit the Manolo at shoeblogs.com.

Picky Meeters

Looking for love in extremely specific places

If you're afraid of the stigma of Internet dating, you should get over it. It's not like there's some guarantee that the person who chats you up at a party and hands you his/her number isn't a serial killer. The real problem with online dating is how vast the pool is — and how shallow it seems. That's why we have niche dating sites, havens for those who have a specific sort of someone in mind and probably won't find that someone browsing the corner store. FIONA ZUBLIN (EXPRESS)

THE ATLASPHERE

WHO YOU'LL MEET HERE: Ayn Rand fans: objectivists, libertarians, "free-thinkers," anyone who thinks poor people are only poor because they're less virtuous.

DETAILS: Free to browse. In order to view photos and contact people you must purchase a $10/month subscription; 15,000 profiles; The-atlasphere.com.

REPRESENTATIVE SENTENCE, PRESENTED WITHOUT COMMENT: "I am the most honest person I know. I am somewhat like Howard Roark, people will be nice to me to my face but some people describe me (mostly behind my back) as 'too logical,' 'doesn't recognise the human side of things,' 'has to have a reason for everything he says and does,' 'stubborn, difficult, 'doesn't just go with the flow' and too idealistic. I am quite different than most people."

WHAT WE'D EXPECT FROM A DATE: Everyone has to pay for their own food, preferably in gold.

CUPIDTINO

WHO YOU'LL MEET HERE: Apple fanboys. Apple fangirls. People who solve bar fights using iPhones and talk about how their dating website has an "uncluttered interface" and have "Stay Hungry, Stay Foolish" tattooed on their wrists.

DETAILS: $4.79 a month (changes with the price of a venti mocha lite in the Cupertino Starbucks); 30,000 have signed up; Cupidтино.com.

REPRESENTATIVE SENTENCE, PRESENTED WITHOUT COMMENT: "I listen to tech podcasts more than music ... I play disc golf when I can, and I'm an avid geocacher."

WHAT WE'D EXPECT FROM A DATE: You'd probably FaceTime for a couple of hours before timidly looking up from your iPads and ordering venti mocha lites.

FARMERS ONLY

WHO YOU'LL MEET HERE: Down-home country guys and women who know how to shoe a horse. You do not have to own or work on a farm to join, so city mice with horse and buggy fantasies should feel free to take a look.

DETAILS: Free to sign up and browse. To send personal messages you'll have to pay $16 per month (or $50 for 6 months); the site claims to have more than 100,000 members; Farmerson-ly.com.

REPRESENTATIVE SENTENCE, PRESENTED WITHOUT COMMENT: "I am tired of this internet dating ... if you can even call it that. Someone needs to COWBOY UP and BE that ONE."

WHAT WE'D EXPECT FROM A DATE: Once around the park in the tractor, driver, and keep your eyes on the road.

DATE GINGER

WHO YOU'LL MEET HERE: Ginger supremacists, people who had enormous childhood crushes on Jean Grey from "X-Men" or Josie of "Josie and the Pussycats."

DETAILS: Free to browse profiles, chat with other members, send messages and write a "dating diary" for a $30/month subscription; DateGinger.com.

REPRESENTATIVE SENTENCE, PRESENTED WITH A LITTLE BIT OF COMMENT: "rad." (That was an entire profile.)

WHAT WE'D EXPECT FROM A DATE: It depends if you wind up with an actual ginger (in which case it's just a normal date but you both carry sunshades) or just someone looking to date a ginger (in which case they will probably ask to touch your hair, and it will be creepy).

HAUNTED LOVE

None of these websites caters to the single largest demographic in history: the dead. Ghostsingles.com allows you to search for other lonely ghosts, specifying whether they died "horribly," "mysteriously," "tragically" or "suddenly." The site is free, but you have to be dead first. Ghosts are tied to the place where they died, so a date might be hard, unless you find a cute coffee shop where a lot of people suspiciously went missing. Ghostsingles.com enables chat with other ghosts, but it's mostly random Internet mortals saying "lol."

ALIKewise

WHO YOU'LL MEET HERE: People who define themselves by what they like rather than what they are like. Which, incidentally, is a reference to a book. If you know which one, maybe we should date. When you join, you name books that you think represent your taste and browse other people's profiles by searching for books and authors they like.

DETAILS: Free, but may start charging for "certain features" at some point; Alikewise.com.

REPRESENTATIVE SENTENCE, PRESENTED WITHOUT COMMENT:

On "Infinite Jest": "My first exposure to David Foster Wallace, and one which yields up new insights on every rereading. It bugs me, though, when he mangles the math."

WHAT WE'D EXPECT FROM A DATE: "So, what have you been reading lately?"

TREK PASSIONS

WHO YOU'LL MEET HERE: Though it's clearly aimed at "Star Trek" fanatics, most geeks have multiple geek interests, and you can find enthusiasts of "Star Wars," "Battlestar Galactica" and "Doctor Who" here as well.

DETAILS: Free; Trekpassions.com.

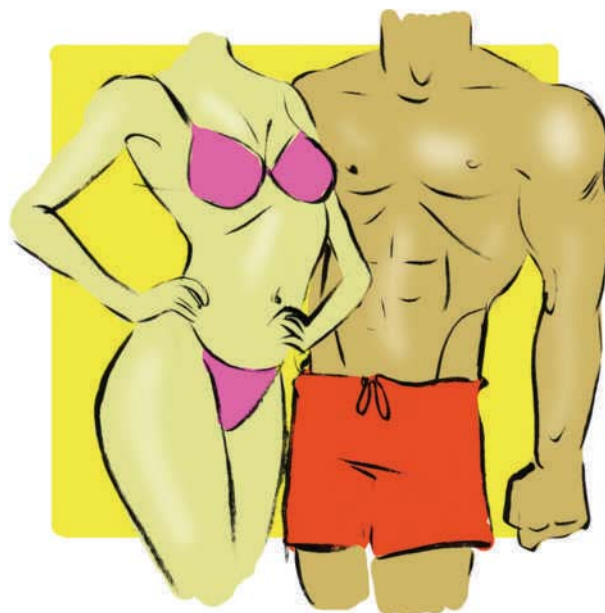

REPRESENTATIVE SENTENCE, PRESENTED WITHOUT COMMENT:

"Salutations [insert name]! You have just stumbled across my obligatory description section! [ACHIEVEMENT UNLOCKED] Welcome. I am a carbon-based student currently attending college on an utterly insignificant little blue-green planet whose ape-descended life forms are so amazingly primitive that they still think social networking sites are a pretty neat idea."

WHAT WE'D EXPECT FROM A DATE:

Speaking Klingon is for casual fans. You'll flirt in Ferengi, the constructed language of the less-popular alien people of Ferenginar.

BEAUTIFUL PEOPLE

WHO YOU'LL MEET HERE: People who desperately need you to tell them they're beautiful. This, in case you were wondering, is the road to happiness. To browse, you have to create a profile and upload a photo, then wait 48 hours while other members vote on whether you're hot enough to join.

DETAILS: Free; Beautifulpeople.com.

REPRESENTATIVE SENTENCE, PRESENTED WITH A LITTLE COMMENT:

"Live is short, to be boring"
(This is not a typo.)

WHAT WE'D EXPECT FROM A DATE: "You're prettier in your pictures." "You talk a lot." Strolling to the reflecting pool and staring at ourselves so intently that we fall in.

THOMAS PITILLI ILLUSTRATIONS/FOR EXPRESS

STACHE PASSIONS

WHO YOU'LL MEET HERE:

People who are proud of their ability to grow a mustache, and others who've always secretly wanted to date a Civil War general. You can sort results by mustache styles — Walrus, Pencil, Fu Manchu, etc.

DETAILS: Free; Stachepassions.com.

REPRESENTATIVE SENTENCE, PRESENTED WITHOUT COMMENT:

"I am looking for a girl that can love my moustache as much as me."

WHAT WE'D EXPECT FROM A DATE: It's going to tickle when you kiss him.

Teaching Moment

When I was a high-school teacher, I lived near enough to the school that I would occasionally see my students out and about, living their daily lives—or, in the case when I saw my very-much-not-21 pupil in a bar, living their weekend lives. It was always a little awkward (never more so than when I ran into two students in the grocery store and all I had in my cart was red wine and kitty litter).

Usually in classroom-centric films, the instructor delivers a moving speech that informs his students about his motivation for teaching. That's not the case in Philippe Falardeau's "Monsieur Lazhar," an extraordinary French Canadian film that opens tomorrow. Lazhar is an Algerian immigrant hired to teach an elementary-school class after the former teacher hangs herself. While we see very little of Lazhar's life outside of school, we do see brief images that show a quietly lonely man who leaves as small of a footprint as possible. And yet, in these short moments, we get a more complete picture of the teacher as a man than we ever did in "Dead Poets Society" or any other teacher film.

The shots of Lazhar at home really prove that pictures can be worth thousands of words. I only wonder what the image of me, my kitty litter and my wine revealed to those students in the Safeway.

Segel's 'The Five-Year Engagement' is as sweet and delightful as it is brutally honest

Film Review

Is Jason Segel a man or a Muppet?

In "The Five-Year Engagement," a running sight gag has the enormously adorable comic actor dressed in a pink bunny suit, which his character Tom wore to the New Year's Eve party where he met Violet (Emily Blunt). She's dressed as a comely, doe-eyed Princess Di, and it's no wonder that the two hit it off. Precisely one year later, as "The Five-Year Engagement" opens, Tom proposes to Violet in one of the cutest marry-me sequences staged in recent movie history.

In fact, the first 45 minutes or so of "The Five-Year Engagement," which Segel co-wrote with director Nicholas Stoller, pop and zing with both comic fizz and refreshing authenticity. Set to a delicious soundtrack dominated by Van Morrison standards, Tom and Violet's lives feel more real than the usual Hollywood confections, with Tom working as a sous chef in a tony San Francisco restaurant and Violet anxiously awaiting acceptance to a grad-school psychology department.

As the leading couple, Blunt and Segel affect an easygoing, mildly naughty banter, and they're surrounded by terrific supporting players: Alison Brie, as Violet's sister Suzie, nails the gnarly technical challenge of delivering a tearful engagement toast at a prenuptial party, and moments later Chris Pratt, as Tom's best friend Alex, delivers an equally funny, wildly inappropriate encomium, then proceeds to steal every scene he's in.

"The Five-Year Engagement" hits a speed bump right when Tom and Violet do, after they move to Michigan for Violet's post-doc appointment. Tom can't find a job and winds up making sandwiches at the legendary Zingerman's Deli; Violet comes under the sway of a flashy psych professor and the two begin

Hidden Talents

Alison Brie, above, who plays Pete Campbell's wife, Trudy, on "Mad Men" and Annie Edison on "Community" adopted a British accent as Emily Blunt's sister in "The Five-Year Engagement." She did it, the actress told New York Magazine, by "stalking Blunt like a psychopath and just standing near her and mumbling whatever she was saying." Brie was so convincing that producer Judd Apatow didn't even realize the accent was fake: "I was shocked, because I love her on 'Mad Men' and I didn't even make the connection," he told the magazine.

(EXPRESS)

to grow apart. This is the blue period most romantic comedies gloss over with attractively sad montage sequences set to torchy ballads.

But instead of rushing toward resolution, Segel and Stoller dig in, giving Tom's deepening depression increasingly alarming physical cues, from a set of unruly lamb chop facial whiskers to the now-filthy bunny suit, which he wears on particularly aimless days. Trapped in the dreary snow banks of Ann Arbor, at least, Segel is definitely a Muppet.

Because it's so willing to drill down into Tom and Violet's misery, the film involves a higher grim-to-grin ratio than its fluffier brethren. But there's an unmistakable ring of truth to the couple's conflicts and mixed feelings. Even at its darkest and weirdest, "The Five-Year Engagement" seems intent on being as sweet as it is brutally honest.

'The Pirates! Band of Misfits' is a wacky, charming adventure

Film Review

Don't let the title fool you. "The Pirates! Band of Misfits" is not set on the high seas, and its main characters are pirates in name only.

That last part, in this case, is literally true. The charmingly goofy animated feature — a welcome return by Aardman Animations to its signature clay-animation style — features characters known only as the Pirate Captain, the Pirate With Gout, the Albino Pirate, etc. Aside from wearing tricorne hats and other accoutrements of the buccaneer lifestyle, this motley crew might as well be any old 19th-century street gang with a galleon. The day-to-day business of pirating — plundering, running people through — they're not so good at.

This is why their chances of winning the Pirate of the Year award do not look great.

Aardman Animations returns to claymation for "The Pirates! Band of Misfits."

The Pirates! Band Of Misfits (PG)

► Directors: Peter Lord, Jeff Newitt

► Stars: Hugh Grant, Salma Hayek, Jeremy Piven

► In a Nutshell: Pirate Captain sets out on a mission to defeat his rivals Black Bellamy and Cutlass Liz for the Pirate of the Year award.

"The Pirates!" is built around the premise of a reality-TV-style contest between the Pirate Captain (voiced by Hugh Grant) and three other blackguards: Black Bellamy (Jeremy Piven), Cutlass Liz (Salma Hayek) and Peg Leg Hastings.

But after that somewhat sluggish setup, the movie quickly — and giddily — sets sail for even wackier waters. MICHAEL O'SULLIVAN

Tell-Tale Signs Of a Bad Idea

Film Review

See the right promotional photo of John Cusack playing Edgar Allan Poe in "The Raven," and it briefly looks like a good idea: The high forehead, the shadowed eyes — there's enough of a resemblance to tantalize. If Hollywood's going to turn the author who invented detective fiction into a crime fighter himself, perhaps this is our guy.

But then Edgar Allan Poe walks into a bar and starts talking, and we immediately understand why Cusack is not known for playing men who lived before 1984.

John Cusack resembles Edgar Allan Poe in "The Raven" — until he speaks.

Nothing in the actor's cadence suggests he has changed to blend in with the story's 1849 setting. The unconvincing dialogue makes little attempt to capture Poe's idiom.

The movie's conceit takes biographical fact — Poe died under mysterious conditions — and spins an action-film fantasy to fit it. Here, the booze-weakened author hunts a serial killer he has inspired.

Like the recent Sherlock Holmes films, "The Raven" seems content to steal a famous figure's name and leave any stabs at authenticity to the set and costume designers.

21 JUMP STREET (R, 100 minutes) The lack of originality or creative ingenuity that "21 Jump Street" symbolizes is addressed head-on early in the film, when a surly police captain tells two new recruits that the force has resurrected a defunct program from 30 years ago that sent undercover cops into high schools. The neophytes he's screaming at are Schmidt (Jonah Hill) and Jenko (Channing Tatum), a bumbling nerd and good-looking dullard, respectively, who were arch-opposites in their high school but have become best buds since going through the police academy. Despite the edginess and vulgarity, the production is suffused by an unmistakable sweetness. "21 Jump Street" might be yet another product of Hollywood's recycling program, but it deserves to be noticed. A.H.

AMERICAN REUNION (R, 113 minutes) Like Stifler, "American Reunion" refuses to grow up. The obsession with sex has not changed. The subject of coupling, uncoupling and re-coupling with exes is almost the sole subject of conversation at this reunion. There's precious little comedy mined from the fact that people change. It pushes R-rated movie boundaries: If you've ever wondered what a nude Jason Biggs looks like smooshed up against glass, your prayers will be answered. At times it goes beyond tweaking taboos to the downright inappropriate. A subplot about a neighborhood girl (Ali Cobrin) — she's turning 18 and has the hots for Jim, her former babysitter — borders on the pedophilic. M.O.

THE CABIN IN THE WOODS (R, 95 minutes) Like its spiritual heirs, "The Cabin in the Woods" comes not only to praise the slasher-, zombie- and gore-fests of yore but to critique them, elaborating on their grammatical elements and archetypal figures even while searching for ways to put them to novel use. The opening scenes are when viewers meet the principal players, who hew telegenically to horror-movie conventions. When they all pile into an RV and head for one of their cousin's new place on a rural lake, carnage is sure to ensue; when they encounter a spooky old coot at an abandoned gas station on their way, their tragic fates are all but sealed. As a playful departure from the torture porn that it obliquely lampoons, "The Cabin in the Woods" marks a welcome return of cheap thrills and simple bump-in-the-night frights, with some stinging self-critical commentary on the side. A.H.

CHIMPANZEE (G, 82 minutes) "Chimpanzee," the follow-up feature to Alastair Fothergill and Mark Linfield's "Earth," is one part "Wild Kingdom" and one part wacky-talking-animal tale. As narrated by Tim Allen, the chimps at the center of "Chimpanzee" appear to think out loud as they forage for food, groom and play with one another and sleep in the Ivory Coast. Throughout the film, which revolves around the adventures of an adorable baby chimp that the filmmakers have nicknamed Oscar, Allen doesn't just describe the action but also gives voice to Oscar's innermost thoughts. Although rated G, "Chimpanzee" features scenes of rival chimpanzee packs attacking each other. Some sequences are intense and frightening. And what happens to Oscar is genuinely, if only momentarily, sad. M.O.

THE HUNGER GAMES (PG-13, 142 minutes) This adaptation of the hit young adult novel centers on grievous violence and children, who, in author Suzanne Collins' floridly postapocalyptic future, are subjected to an annual ritual wherein they murder one another as part of a nationwide reality show. That perverse dystopia is brought faithfully, if unspectacularly, to life by director Gary Ross. If the series' legions of fans miss a detail here or a subplot there, they'll still recognize its bones and sinew, especially in Jennifer Lawrence's eagle-eyed heroine, Katniss Everdeen. The Hunger Games have been instituted by the elite leaders of a country in order to keep down a restive populace. After randomly plucking a boy and a girl from each of the federation's districts, a shadowy government-entertainment complex subjects them to a kill-or-be-killed group hunt. Lawrence is never less than grounded and believable as a young woman forced by circumstance to assume wisdom far beyond her years. A.H.

THE LUCKY ONE (PG-13, 101 minutes) Can a drama be too restrained? "The Lucky One," adapted from a Nicholas Sparks novel, stars Zac Efron in a sudsy romantic melodrama. All great romances hinge on two things: keeping the principals apart and getting them together. When a conclusion is as foregone as the one in "The Lucky One," the first part of the equation becomes nothing but contrivance and entertainment lookout

ginned-up conflict. Most of "The Lucky One" consists of proving how sensitive Logan (Efron) is and how put-upon Beth (Taylor Schilling) is as she clatters around her grandmother's impeccably distressed cottage and affects Veronica Lake-esque bangs-in-the-eye sultriness. A.H. MIRROR MIRROR (PG, 106 minutes) Director Tarsem Singh has shown a gift for fantastical settings, and Snow White's kingdom is no exception. Unfortunately, actress Lily Collins as Snow White offers a pale reflection of her stunning setting. The plot is simple enough for younger Disney princess fans to follow. The fair Snow White is sequestered in her late father's castle by her pathologically vain stepmother, the Evil Queen (Julia Roberts). After sneaking out of the fortress for a visit to the village, Snow has a typical meet-up with Prince Alcott of Valencia in the woods. He has been bound and burgled, and she, having no idea he is a prince, unties him and then blushes furiously. Later, when the prince arrives at the castle looking for sanctuary, the queen goes into cougar mode. But naturally, the prince has eyes only for Snow. Disney's kind and gentle Snow White was charming, could sing and regularly talked to woodland creatures. The same cannot be said of Collins. Most of Snow's interactions with the magnetic prince are tepid, except for one flirty sword fight. SANDIE ANGULO CHEN THINK LIKE A MAN (PG-13, 120 minutes) An all-star revue of some of the most physically stunning actors in Hollywood, "Think Like a Man" is a pleasure if only on a purely sensory level. The nine main characters in "Think Like a Man" might be archetypes bordering on stereotypes, but all manage to resemble authentic human beings, thanks to the terrific actors who play them: Taraji P. Henson, Meagan Good, Regina Hall and Gabrielle Union. Each of these gorgeous, high-achieving, self-aware women faces a specific dating problem for which Steve Harvey, author of the book the movie is based upon, has just the right advice. Forget hackneyed clichés about Players and Dreamers and the scheming women who seek to domesticate them. Focus on the pleasures of watching a group of gifted actors spar and seduce each other with genuine warmth, and "Think Like a Man" just might go straight to your head. A.H. THE THREE STOOGES (PG, 92 minutes) The imbecilic "Stooges" still manages to pummel you into submission with 92 minutes of relentless stupidity. Even by Stooges standards, it's overly juvenile and totally dumb. The original Stooges, of course, were a vaudeville act whose physical shtick was characterized by aggressive but finely choreographed kicks, punches, snaps and falls. With the Farrelly brothers' (Bobby and Peter) "Stooges," the routine hits a new low. The Farrellys have made funny movies mining smart humor from notoriously idiotic protagonists, but the brothers have been stuck in a rut lately, and "Stooges" isn't going to help pull them out. SEAN O'CONNELL WRATH OF THE TITANS (PG-13, 99 minutes) The only reason you'll feel any wrath is because you shelled out 12 bucks for this steaming bucket of half-baked plot, clichéd dialogue and disappointing 3-D special effects. It might be even worse than the original. Who, exactly, was clamoring for a follow-up? As before, Sam Worthington plays Greek hero Perseus, the demigod son of Zeus (Liam Neeson). Zeus is imprisoned by his brother Hades (Ralph Fiennes) in an effort to overthrow the Olympian gods and resurrect Kronos, the dormant leader of the evil Titans. To save Zeus, Perseus goes on a quest to the underworld. At stake is not just his father's life, but the future of the entire world. In an effort to appeal to audiences who might resist anything that smacks of the classics, the dialogue includes anachronisms such as "You gotta be kiddin' me." They got that right. M.O.

TV weekend lookout

Best Bets

FRI
9:00

Grimm (NBC) Nick's (David Giuntoli, right) investigation of a construction worker's death leads him into a long-standing feud in the creature world, and the suspect summons reapers to get rid of the Grimm. At Juliette's insistence, Nick invites Monroe to dinner, with interesting results.

SAT
8:00

The Blind Side (ABC) A true story that had a major box-office impact, this drama earned Sandra Bullock her first Oscar. She and Tim McGraw play a Southern couple who take in troubled youth Michael Oher and give him the opportunity to become a football standout.

SUN
9:00

TV Land Awards 2012 (TVLAND) Kelly Ripa, left, returns to host the 10th anniversary of this awards extravaganza that celebrates classic television, film and music icons. Among the highlights will be "One Day at a Time" and "Laverne & Shirley" being honored with the Innovator and Fan Favorite awards, respectively.

10:00

My Big Fat American Gypsy Wedding (TLC) This new spin-off series takes viewers on a journey into the lives of America's Gypsy and Traveller communities, revealing the hidden culture and over-the-top weddings that exist in our own backyards. (TRIBUNE MEDIA)

Time Of the Season

MAD MEN
SUN
10:00

Those who used to complain that AMC's "Mad Men" was plodding along at a petty soap opera pace will probably start carping now that too many weird things are happening at once. Last week, Don Draper (Jon Hamm, above) flipped out on his new bride. Peggy had a sordid liaison in a movie theater. And old-school Roger Sterling dropped acid! The times, on "Mad Men," they are a-changin'! (UNIVERSAL UCLICK)

Reality

New Battleground

It's easy to root for the Sea Shepherd when it's going after the commercial whaling industry. The lines between heroes and villains get blurrier, though, when the "bad guys" are native islanders with a centuries-old cultural tradition of whaling. On "Whale Wars: Viking Shores" (Fri., 9 p.m., APL), Capt. Paul Watson and his crew visit the Faeroe Islands to stop what they see as a cruel and environmentally unsound practice. (TM)

“If WRKS and WBLs are merging, if it’s true, it’s kinda like France and Germany becoming ‘Freuechland.’”

— @DANCHARNAS reacts to news that the two long-standing New York radio stations are merging to make way for an FM ESPN Radio channel.

“Could we be looking at the next ‘Borat’? Certainly, anything that makes us all forget the horror that was Bruno would be welcome, but whether or not ‘The Dictator’ is that film remains to be seen.”

— PUNCHDRUNKCRITICS.COM thought the opening scene of Sacha Baron Cohen’s movie “The Dictator,” released this week by Paramount, is hilarious.

Horoscope

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Tiny changes in the way you put two and two together today will make a large difference for you. Keep up with the times.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Those closest to you will want to share a great deal as fast as they can today, and you'll want to provide what you can in return.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll receive input today from a number of friends. What you do with the information available to you will bring you great satisfaction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may want to examine your own motives when you realize what you're feeling doesn't match what you think is important.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A mystery arises around someone who has been on the periphery for some time. He or she will now be all-important for a time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You know exactly what has to happen today, and you know exactly how to get it done — but you'll be aware of an option not always available.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Time you spend with a friend today gives you more than the enjoyment you have come to expect and appreciate. Be open for more.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You may be confused between what is actually good for you, and simple sexual thrill that cannot lead to anything more.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The fact that you are not the center of attention should not be bothering you as much as it is — or is there something else going on?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Now is no time to hold back. When the opportunity arises, you'll want to pull out all the stops and do what only you really know how to do!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Options you face today may seem complicated, but deep down you know that things are straightforward. Don't be scared off.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll want to check out all the possibilities you are facing today before making a decision that cannot be changed, altered or augmented.

Fill in each column, row and 3x3 box with the digits 1 through 9 without repeating any. The twist in Samurai Sudoku is that the digits that appear in the overlapping boxes must work for both puzzles. A piece of advice to get you started: Don't focus on completing one grid at a time. Keep the whole puzzle in mind as you go, because filling in a number in one grid could give you clues to another.
